

AUTUMN MUSINGS.

For The Tribune.
BY AUGUSTUS SNODGRASS.

The fallen leaves lie on the ground,
The chilling winds fly o'er the freezing North;
Nature, as sick'ning, waits a mortal wound,
Lies fainting on the verge of dropping Earth.

The brook, less wanton, wanders through the vale;
The flowers gaze on the fading earth and die;
Afar, the tread of wretched Winter pale
Is heard in whistling tempests sweeping by.

Alas! thus the changing seasons run their round—
The soft-eyed Spring—the Summer wanting slow—
The Autumn here, with eyes turned on the ground,
The Winter mailed in bars of ice and snow.

He who would gaze on Nature's loveliest charms,
And breathe the raptures of a Summer's day,
Behold! 'tis approach of Winter's wild alarms,
And droops like Nature into sad decay.

Alas! have loved to tread the leaves, I know—
And watch the quick forest's shade repose—
To watch the morning, gently flushing dawn,
And day, in golden splendor, seek its close.

A few brief days, and these shall come again,
With song of birds, and melody of streams,
And life once more around me in joyous reign,
And feed the soul with truth and kindly dreams.

But still the changing seasons of the heart!
The varied vision of the realm of love!
When once the heavenly ministers depart,
Flaunt from us no distant joys they rove.

The gentle—whose souls the flaming blood alone—
The kindly word—whose words are love—
The treasured token—teaching Love a song—
The answering glance—whose downward Heaven doth

Let these be false—how soon the heart conceals!
Love droops and wearies, and blurs his weeping eyes;
Love, numb, at tears his fading charms conceals,
And Heaven shrinks backward in the frowning skies.

Ye rolling years—like me I may be borne,
Down life's swift stream in one unvarying night,
And Spirit faster with rapidity weaned,
The path obscured by Winter's cheerless night!

LATER FROM EUROPE.

The steamer ACADIA arrived at Boston on Thursday morning, with Liverpool dates to the 4th inst., sixteen days later than had before been received. There is but little news of general interest. The American house of Goddard & Hill at Birmingham, has failed for a large amount. The large house of Coventry & Hunter, in London, has also failed and accounts from the South of France bring appalling letters of heavy failure of Corn houses in Marseilles. Money is plenty in England; but there is great dependency among the Commercial classes. Shipping continues very dull.

A conspiracy has been detected among the Chartists to break open Stafford Jail. The jail was securely guarded on all sides. The prisoners were to have seized the Warden as soon as they were allowed to go into the day-room. Having seized him they would secure him in some safe place, and take from him a key which led to an adjoining room, in which were sixty stand of arms. They were to possess themselves of these arms, and then prepared for any opposition that might present itself, they intended to make prisoners of the persons in charge of the jail, and liberate all the Chartists who are at present in custody. They would then fight their own way from the town, if they could not escape from detection. What would have been the ulterior mode of action is a secret.

The Liverpool Cotton Market has improved, and the transactions, compared with those of several weeks past, are much increased, enabling the holders of common qualities of Surat and common to middle fine qualities of American to obtain fully 4d. advance on former quotations; in other kinds there is not any change, but, on the whole, the market is decidedly steadier, with a more healthy appearance.

The barque Hops, of London, was wrecked on the Goodwin Sands on the 22d ult. The crew were all saved: loss, between £5,000 and £6,000. The Bordeaux journals give an account of the total destruction by fire of the American ship Havre, of 130 tons, Captain Kowen, lately arrived in that port from New-Orleans, and intending to return immediately in ballast.

It is stated that the Belgian Government has determined to make reprisals on the American trade, in consequence of the Government of the United States having levied tonnage and other duties not paid by favored Nations, on the steamer British Queen in her last voyage from Antwerp to New York. According to the "Moniteur Belge" of Wednesday, the following ordinance has been made:

"The vessels of the United States in future be subjected in Belgian ports to the tonnage and pilotage dues, chargeable according to the regulations in force, upon the vessels of nations which are not favored. The reimbursement of the tolls of the Scheldt is provisionally suspended as regards the vessels of the United States."

REMOVED INDICATION OF THE KING OF FRANCE.—It is stated that the French King has discussed with persons in his confidence the propriety of abdicating the throne in favor of the Duke de Nemours.

NEW YORK BY BOZ.—A new work by Boz (Dickens) is announced to commence in January next, and to be continued in monthly parts, at one shilling each.

By an arrival from the Cape of Good Hope, we have papers to the 6th of August, which bring news of the termination of the insurrection at Port Natal and the return of part of the expedition under Lieut. Col. Clotie, after he had completed the pacification of the Colony.

The greater portion of the town of Zachenow, in Russia, has been destroyed by fire, and three hundred families reduced to destitution.

Latest accounts from Barcelona represent the portion of the country near the Pyrenees as still quiet.

Intelligence had been received at Constantinople, according to the Augsburg Gazette, that the Shah of Persia had accepted the mediation of Great Britain to arrange the differences between him and the Ottoman Porte.

From Spain there is nothing of interest. All apprehensions of a change or modification of the Ministry have ceased. Zubizarra is appointed Inspector of Customs by land and sea in the province of Catalonia.

ALGERS.—Latest accounts from Algiers represent the French as more successful in their attempts to occupy the interior portions of the country. Gen. Bugeaud was quietly advancing, and had destroyed on his way a fort belonging to the Ex-Khalif Ben Salem, and discovered near a village a number of silos full of wheat, barley and salt. Several tribes had made their submission to the Governor General, who reached on the 6th inst. the Oued Souffiah, near Bon-el-Gharoubi.

On the 5th, the rear guard of the expedition was harassed by some horsemen and Kaybules, under them. In this affair the French had one soldier killed and eleven wounded. Col. Lebouard, of the 48th Regiment, was shot dead from behind a bush by a Kaybule, whilst reconnoitering the ground in advance of his Regiment.

A pension of £300 has been conferred on William Wordsworth.

Solomon Herschell, Chief Rabbi of the Jews in England, died in London October 31, after a long illness. He was 82 years of age, and had officiated as Chief Rabbi upwards of 42 years.

The Prince de Joinville and the Duke d'Aumale had arrived at Lisbon from Brest. The former was about to proceed to Brazil, and the latter to Algiers.

Allen Cunningham died suddenly at his residence in London on the 22d.

The death of Mr. Sergeant Spankie, an eminent lawyer, and the counsel for the East India and other Companies, is announced in the English papers.

Grace Darling, the heroine, is at last dead. She died at Bramburgh, on the 20th, in the 25th year of her age, of a lingering consumption.

Mr. O'Connell has resigned the Majority of the City of Dublin and proposed Alderman George Rao to fill the office for the coming year, who was then elected, and invested with his insignia.

In regard to the feelings expressed towards this country in London, we extract the following portion of the money article of the Chronicle of the 3d:

It is stated in the accounts lately received from the United States that men of all parties and classes are beginning to occupy themselves seriously in the consideration of plans for the restoration of State credit as the best means of restoring the general prosperity. We hail this movement as the dawn of better days, both for America and for England; and we rejoice that it should come from the people generally, the source of all power in the States. It will render the measures adopted more certain in their effects, and more honorable to the Federal Republic. The credit of America being restored, and our Corn Laws placed on a proper footing, the two countries may begin together a long career of prosperity. We understand that the State of Illinois, which has been so much embarrassed by vast undertakings of canals and railroads, is making an effort with the view of paying a part of the interest on her debt due in January. This is beginning the right way, and, we hope, be met by proper encouragement on the part of the European capitalists interested in her stock. A curious and interesting tribute has lately been rendered to Illinois.

An association has been formed in Ireland under the auspices of that excellent person, Father Mathew, (who has, perhaps, done more for his countrymen than any man living,) for promoting the comfort and well being of Irishmen wishing to emigrate to foreign countries. In the prospectus of the association, the State of Illinois is recommended, not only on account of its fertile prairies and fine climate, but for the efforts she is making to fulfill all the obligations of good faith. The good priest would not have recommended Irishmen to adopt a State as their future country whose name might become a byword and a reproach to their children's children. Illinois may yet take the start of her elder sister, Pennsylvania, who has immense resources, and, as we understand, a most respectable rural population, but cursed, in the first instance, with speculative financiers, the author of her misfortunes, and now with manufacturing politicians, who think more of their own little objects than the most important interests of the State.

The principal matters of discussion in the French papers are the proposed commercial treaty with Belgium, the usual complaints in regard to the course of England, and the removal of General Bugeaud from the command of the first military division. Of this latter first, Marshal Soult's letter of dismissal is severely criticised by the Opposition papers.

SYRIA.—Still another collision had taken place between the Maronites and the Druses, and the Pasha had been obliged to interfere. The affairs of Syria appear to be as far from adjustment as ever. According to one account, a camp of 35,000 men was to be formed near Melatira for the purpose of securing peace between the belligerents.

TERIBLE STORM.—A severe storm did great damage near the Goodwin Sands, on the 20th ult. A deal boat was capsized and one of the crew lost. Two briggs were driven ashore and wrecked—the crews of both being saved.

At Hircum the storm was severely felt. About 1 o'clock on Sunday morning, a large brig, called the Wilberforce, from Sunderland, was totally lost, three miles up the beach, by striking on the rocks under the cliff. The whole of the crew, ten in number, including the master, Mr. Nixon, perished with the ship. About the same time a large bark, name at present unknown, was observed to go down between four and five miles off Cromer Lighthouse. Her crew, supposed to consist of sixteen persons, sank with her and perished.

The catastrophe was witnessed by a fishing coble belonging to Whitby, but the violence of the Hurricane prevented them going near her to render assistance.

At Bideford the loss of life was dreadful in the extreme. Several vessels were totally lost on Saturday and Sunday morning. Two of them are known to be the Auspicious, from Lowering, and the Thomas and Eliza, of Neath. On Saturday morning a brig called the Morgan, of Tenby, from Haverly to Llanelli, laden with copper ore, foundered in St. Ives Bay, and all on board met with a watery grave.

Another vessel, the Friends of Carib, in Wales, went down in the course of the same morning, in the Channel, those on board perishing with her. Many other vessels are known to have been wrecked, but their names and fate of the crew have not been received.

A REPLY TO TOM CAMPBELL.—Every one remembers Campbell's lines to the American Flag, published some time since in all our papers. They ran thus:

United States! your banner wears
Two emblems: one of fame;
Alas! the other that hears
The groans of your chained slaves.

The white man's liberty in 'Cape
Slaves' blazoned by your stars—
But what's the meaning of your stripes?
They mean your negroes' scars.

George Lunt, in his new volume of Poems, just now passing through the press, thus gives the reply courteous to the English Flag:

England! whence came each glowing hue,
That this venal flag of 'auster' light—
Reminds us of your crimes?
Grossed with the moonbeam's pearly white?

The blood and brine—the blue and red—
Let Asia's groaning millions speak,
The white it stains the cold red
From starving India's pallid cheek!

CRAB AND SNAP SMITH.—"Does Mr. Smith live here?"

"Which Mr. Smith? There are many of that name in these parts."

"The man I want is a sour, crabbed chap, and they call him Crab Smith."

"O the d—l! I spoke the man."

This Crab Smith resided at one time in Fairbank. He was always finding fault with something. The Medusa brought in a noble cargo of oil, and I. "Yes," he would answer, "but oil is low now." At another time the Quamphagan arrived. I met Smith. "Well," said I, "oil is enormously high." "Yes," said he, "but the Quamphagan has but 2,000 barrels." When the Medusa had again arrived, she brought 2,500 barrels, and oil was high. I congratulated Mr. Smith.

"Ah!" said he, "if it were not for the five hundred barrels of whale oil, we might make something."

Crab Smith had a brother in Hyannis, who was indeed of the same kind and kin. They called him Snap Smith. He was a man who kept the terrapin a year, expecting to hear it sing, under the impression that he had captured what he called a "turtle dove." A neighbor of Snap had killed and dressed a hog. "If I had half of that," said Snap, "I should think myself well off." The neighbor was a good soul, and he wished to see Snap ease once in his life, so he sent Snap half the hog. I met Snap a day or two after, as I was crossing over from the Port. "A valuable present," said I, "considering the hard times." "I don't know about that," said he, "come to cut up, there was a dreadful little mess of it. If I had other half too, it might be something worth while."

THE GERMAN TARIFF.—The Germanic or Austrian League, has given new life to the German Provinces. Cotton and Woolen Factories have sprung up in all parts of the country, and Home Industry receives its reward. The rapid strides which Germany is making in Domestic Manufactures, have alarmed the English Manufacturers.

The London Morning Chronicle of a late date observes that Germany has "pretty well excluded from her markets British Cotton and woolen stuffs, and will ere long raise the duties on cotton yarn and twists." It adds that public opinion throughout Germany moves very strongly in the direction of an increase rather than a diminution of the protective system; and that there is "no hope for the British manufacturer" from the acts and dispositions of the Zoll-Verdin.

No measure, ever projected, has worked better than this protective system in Germany. England had formerly monopolized the Cotton and Woolen trade of that country, but when she refused to take the agricultural products of the northern provinces, those provinces felt it to be indispensably necessary that they should do something for themselves. The most efficient mode of countering this monopolizing spirit of England was adopted. They erected manufacturing establishments, and imposed heavy duties upon English goods. The result is now seen and felt. The Farmer finds a market for his products at home. The Mechanic finds employment in these establishments, and the Laborer his abundance of work. It is a policy with which every one is pleased, and those so significantly benefited by it are too wise to cry out for FREE TRADE. There are no Loco-Focos among the industrious Germans of America. They go for a Protective Tariff.

WOMEN THAN THE TOOTHACHE.—A Dutchman, in proceeding to a place from whence he heard the cries of distress, discovered one of his neighbors lying under a stone wall, which had fallen upon him and fractured his legs. "Well, den, neighbor Vandondiken, vat shud do matter vid you?" "Vat?" said the man, "I am in conditions, vid all deah biggestes upon me, and pot mme legs broke off close by mine puddy." "Mine Cot," said Hooch, "shud dat all? you hollowed so like de devil, I thought you was got the toothache."

POWERFUL MAGNET.—A lecturer was dilating upon the powers of the Magnet, defying any one to show or name any thing surpassing its powers, when a man mounted the stand and told him that woman was the magnet of magnets, for, said he, if the loadstone could attract a piece of iron a foot or two, there was a young woman who, when he was a young man, used to attract him thirteen miles every Sunday to have a chat with her.

"Wife, which way do you suppose the wind is, tonight?"

"Well, really, I don't know. John, but suppose you light a candle, and look in our straw bed."

"How can I tell by that?"

"Why, bless you, don't straws show which way the wind blows?"

"Go to sleep, you chit!"
